LIBERAL STATE CONVENTION.

The Democratic and Liberal State Convention met at St Paul, on the 24th of last month and proceeded as follows:

President — J. N. Castro, Washington.

Vice Presidents — H. L. Buell, Houston; Michael McHugh, Dakota.

Secretary — J. X. Davidson, Ramsey.

The platform adopted, after much tinkering, was as follows:

Resolved. That the Liberal Republicans and Democratic parties in some convention assembled, willing to forget all party peculiarities, for the general welfare, would join with patriotic citizens of all parties to rescue the state and nation from thir great peril, do in best, in the present emergency, to make no recommendations of a strictly party character, wish to recommend all democrats and all republicans to yield a cordial support to the nominees of the Owatonna Convention.

Resolved. That we are in favor of a tariff revenue only to the general government.

Resolved. That we are in favor of a return to speed payment at the earliest practicable day.

Resolved. That we are in favor of an honest administration of the state and general government.

DISTRICT CONVENTION.

Hon. Chas. Bachmann was re-nominated in the Carver District for the legislature.

Robt. Patterson Esq., was also complimented with a renomination for County Commissioner, from the Benton district.

L. H. Griffin, of Carver, was nominated for Commissioner from the Carver district.

John True was nominated for the Legislature from the Watertown district and S. B. Kohler, for county commissioner from the same district. The above nominations are good and will we think meet the approval of the people.

TO SAY WE WILL.

The following, from the Farmington Press, a straight Republican paper, that supports Mr. Davis, undoubtedly expresses the sentiments of every honest man in the Republican party:

There is now more than a possibility that Mr. Dixie may be elected Treasurer. And this would be only what writers term "poetical justice." We have no cause for personal opposition to the Republican nominee, of course, but the way in which Mr. Dixie was signed by our State Convention prompts us to the result, with one vote, at least. Called off the Treasury to regulate its infinitesimal condition through the hands of others, and with rare ability and entire integrity reclaiming it to a state of decency — to be thus thrust aside after he had cleaned the Augean stable, with no chance to appeal to the people for approval, and for no reason but to tickle the arrogance of a clan who claim his office as a sort of divine right; this is what the mass of people who like to see justice done to a faithful servant. With the entire "opposition" vote, and a strong reinforcement from Republicans proper, therefore, we can say that the changes of Mr. Dixie are by no means very dubious.

GRAVES.—Mr. F. G. Gould of Executive, had a most magnificent lot of grapes at the County Fair. Mr. G. is one of the most successful fruit growers in the state. He is the proprietor of a nursery and will furnish trees and plants upon application and will warrant his stock.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS.

Through an inexcusable error, we stated that the fall term of the district court commenced on the 12th of the present month. We should have stated that the term commences on Monday the 6th inst. Parties concerned should bear this in mind.

MILITARY GOODS.—Mr. Silver of the Chaska Millinery Emporium, is in receipt of her fall and winter stock of military goods. She respectfully invites the public generally to inspect her stock.

NEW ADV.—Several new advertisements will appear next week. We were delayed this week.

A Song of Age.

BY F. T. PALGRAVE.

Summer is gone, and Autumn lies

On the earth, dark and clear;

As in the sun-felt year,

The forest full and leafy,

But the winter's dark cloud,

Sits Winter dark and pale,

And Summer's golden glory

Was never seen before.

In the long, long December?

The morning hopes of childhood,

The wisdom pure and tender,

To the broader day of truth,

To the keen, high light of truth

And the strength of manhood:

But we touch the goal

Black Winter numbs the soul,

And the stars of glory

Will no longer burn.

In the days of December?

The morning hopes of childhood,

The wisdom pure and tender,

"LOOSE LEAF."

A lovely young lady burst into a tree,
Sing her, sing her, with a key down derry;
She smiled as she said, "Don't you wish you To swing and to swizzle, and ave to be merry?"
Up jumped a grasshopper, and he said, said
he,
"You can't speak good grammar, so off you're best be,
Naught worse than bad grammar, unless it's bad sherry."
At this she expanded her beautiful wings,
Sing her, sing her, with a key down derry;
And saying, "I hate them there grasshoppers
But I'm not the least bit serious, when Flow'd off to her lunch on a neighboring berry.
The moral of this isn't very absurd;
Sing her, sing her, with a key down derry;
If you're a grasshopper you're a bird,
But if you're a bird, then you're serious, when Taking grammar in one, the other have sherry." —London Fun.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Water in an Acre of Land.
In reply to a query for some crop to be sown in an orchard, Mr. J. Harris, in his Writings and Talks on the Farm, in the American Agriculturist, describes the results of experiments made in June, 1870, by Messrs. Lawes and Gilbert, of England, to ascertain not only the amount of water in an acre of land is required for growing, falling, and in that in which a crop of barley was growing. In making this experiment each nine inches of earth to the depth of four and a half feet were separately tested. The analyses showed that an acre of dry soil three inches deep, about 1,000,000 pounds, or 500 tons; after leaving the crop weighs eighteen times as much, or 9,000,000 pounds; when wet, about one-eighth more.

The following table shows the per centage of water in the land at differ ent depths:

| | Follow Barley | land end |
|-----------------|---------------|----------|
| 1st nine inches | 29.33 | 8.45 |
| 2d " " | 29.33 | 19.32 |
| 3d " " | 34.84 | 22.83 |
| 4th " " | 34.82 | 12.01 |
| 5th " " | 34.74 | 9.28 |
| 6th " " | 34.74 | 27.98 |
| 7th " " | 33.55 | 26.83 |
| Mean..... | 30.65 | 8.56 |

From these figures it appears that the barley crop must have pumped up and evaporated 1,035 tons of water per acre.

Messrs. Lawes and Gilbert say:
"At the excavation proceeded, barley roots were observed to have extended to a depth of six inches, and the roots and the clavate sub-soil appeared to be much more disintegrated
and much drier where the roots had penetrated than where they had not."

Hence Mr. Harris concludes that,
"during the summer months, while the trees are growing rapidly and drawing from the earth moisture, nothing should be done to them except to grow among them—not even a weed.
If anything is grown in autumn and spring it should be eaten off before the dry weather of summer, or else it should be mown and allowed to lie on the surface for a mulch."

Hoof.

Rearing is a coltish trick which is generally lost as the horse grows older.
In such cases it consists in the horse simply raising a little before and then dropping again as if from play only;
at the worst it is a rider, and sometimes the horse goes as far as to throw himself back well. When a colt is first graduated it is a frightful vice, and with an inexperienced rider may be attended with fatal mischief.

The remedy for this vice is the martingale which may either be used with the tail running to the hand, or attached directly by the ordinary rein, or buckle, or, again, by means of a running rein, which commences from the breast-plate of the martingale and then running through the ring of the snaffle with the tail action like it action.
It is used to restrain the hand, and it may then be transferred or attached directly to circumstances so as to bring the horse's head absolutely down to his breast, or, on the other hand, to give it entire liberty, without dismounting.
With a determined bridle nothing short of this last kind will pre vent rearing; and even it will fail in some cases for there are some horses which rear with their fore legs between their fore legs. Nevertheless, they are rare exceptions, and with the majority the martingale in some form is efficacious. It should never be put on the curb rein with rear, and indeed a curb is seldom to be used at all to restrain the hand to that vice; they are always made to restrain the touch of the bit, and unless they are very much inclined to run away, it is far better to trust to a straight bit or plain snaffle, which, by not irritating
the mouth, will often induce them to go pleasantly, whereas a more severe bit will only tend to show them to their temper by rearing.

Breaking a bottle of water between the ears, or a severe blow in the same part, may in some cases be tried but the continued use of the martingale will generally suffice. There is also a method of curing rearers sometimes at tempted by experienced riders, namely, slipping off one side and pulling them back; but it is a dangerous feat for both horse and rider, and has often led to a broken back on the part of the horse, as well as sometimes to severe injury to the rider. It is scarcely possible to remark that the rider should in all cases ride forward and relax the bridle while the horse is in the air.

Will a Good Milk Cow Consume More
Food than a Poor One?

In the report of the Western New York Butter Makers' Association, printed in the Canadian Gentleman, of July 3, p. 427, occurs the following passage: "A good cow, though she gave 310 pounds of butter in a single season,
He (the owner) had to feed her extra well to get this yield from her. One of his neighbors said that it cost all the extra butter to get the extra feed and the others seemed to agree that good milkers are gourmets, and that more care is required to keep good cows in condition than small milkers."

This is precisely our experience, and we have no other. A brother of ours has tested the matter carefully, and indeed the best milkers were the greatest eaters, but the food consumed was in proportion to the size and butcher realized. This was with the com mon native breed. And yet it is known by men who stand as authority that it will cost more to keep a good milk cow than an inferior one. It requires but little thought to see the fallacy of this. Is not the excess of milk from a good cow over a poor one obtained from the food she consumes? And thus, the flesh or condition the same in both cows, how will the excess of milk and butter be accounted for, unless there is an increase of food, to furnish it?—for it has not been shown,

we believe, that the excretions of a good milker are less than those of an inferior cow. If that were the case, several persons would be injured by it,
and the fall of rain and hail was un paralleled in that region. This is a remarkable phenomenon, particularly
in connection with the pleasant sur roundings and climate of the State of Utah and the neighboring states and territories who have experienced every month this year. In his "City of the Saints" (1862), by that famous traveler from Arabia and the lodge regions of Central Africa,
R. F. Burton, in speaking of the climate of Utah, he says: "Be
it ever so arid, there is no want of
water for the wants of the people,
and the want of water is the great problem of the country. The climate is a proverbial expression; a dark
heavy pall which, in woodland coun tries, would burst with its weight,
and discharge its watery stores in
the air, and in the arid, sun-baked surfaces of the earth, the water
is absorbed by the soil, and
the atmosphere is dry and
desert-like."

But the increase of feed in a good
cow is no argument against securing
such a cow. It shows that the machine
was the better for converting food
into the product of dairy—the true
object in dairy. It must therefore appear that the less machines that are employed to change milk into a given quantity of food, the less expense, and
consequently, the more profit.—Cor
Country Gentleman.

Cultivating the White Ash.

The value of the white ash for timber, says Mr. Fuller, is so well known that it is no argument against securing
such a cow. It shows that the machine
was the better for converting food
into the product of dairy—the true
object in dairy. It must therefore
appear that the less machines that are
employed to change milk into a given
quantity of food, the less expense, and
consequently, the more profit.—Cor

month this year. In his "City of the Saints" (1862), by that famous
traveler from Arabia and the
lodge regions of Central Africa,
R. F. Burton, in speaking of
the climate of Utah, he says: "Be
it ever so arid, there is no want of
water for the wants of the people,
and the want of water is the great
problem of the country. The
climate is a proverbial expression; a dark
heavy pall which, in woodland coun
tries, would burst with its weight,
and discharge its watery stores in
the air, and in the arid, sun-baked
surfaces of the earth, the water
is absorbed by the soil, and
the atmosphere is dry and
desert-like."

But the increase of feed in a good
cow is no argument against securing
such a cow. It shows that the machine
was the better for converting food
into the product of dairy—the true
object in dairy. It must therefore
appear that the less machines that are
employed to change milk into a given
quantity of food, the less expense, and
consequently, the more profit.—Cor

From the New York Herald, Sept. 4.

A brief dispatch from Salt Lake City informs us that on Tuesday last there was a great storm in that valley; that it extended generally over the territory,
and the lightning was very frequent.
Several persons were injured by it, and the fall of rain and hail was un paralleled in that region. This is a remarkable phenomenon, particularly
in connection with the pleasant sur
roundings and climate of the State of Utah and the neighboring states and
territories who have experienced every
month this year. In his "City of the Saints" (1862), by that famous

Half Alive.

It is a sin to pass through life only half alive. Yet there are many whose habitual condition is one of languor and debility. They complain of no specific disease; they suffer from no acute malady, but are weak and languid, which affords mortal pleasure to their more active and energetic neighbors.

Now, what does common sense under these circumstances? The answer is, to make the system strong and energetic, not merely for an hour or two, to sink afterwards into a mere state of languor and debility, but for the rest of one's life.

These are the great stretches of time
which require a strong and energetic system
to support them.

During the first few days after the ar rival of the Saints there was little rain either in spring or autumn; in 1860 it extended to the middle of June. The change may be attributed to cultivation and plantation; thus also may be explained
the North American Indian's habit of great stretches of time.

But while the planting and cultiva tion of trees, even in small groves, in desert regions, have brought down the rain, where rain was unknown before, the people of Utah and the adjoining Territories attribute the marked in crease in rainfall and timber growth to the cultivation of this valuable fruit.

But the question is, how is it to be accom plished?

The answer to this question, founded on the various experiments of a quarter of a century, is that there is no specific remedy, but a general
one, which is to be applied to the whole system.

It should not be forgotten that white cholera seems to have disappeared from this country, it is terribly fatal just now in all the large cities of France, Germany, Austria and Italy. It has gained such a foothold that it seems impossible to arrest it, although every effort to that end has been tried. No one need be surprised at a visitation next season, and if it does not come, there will be cause to be thankful. It seems to be entreating itself in preparation for future havoc. The yellow fever has advanced farther north than is customary, but it never yet survived a frost. There is no peril in this section from that source.

MONET SENT WEST BY EXPRESS.

From Chicago Times, 3d.

The receipt of currency through the three principal express companies, since last Thursday, show a very encouraging exhibit, and at the same time the inquiry naturally arises, "Where has it all gone?" The amount will aggregate, in round numbers, to over $15,000,000. One would suppose that there was an abundance indicated in these figures, which only represent a part of the stream which has been flowing hitherward from untried sources, sufficient at least to keep the pot boiling. Whether it is all locked up in strong boxes, or hidden away in old women's stockings, there is something reassuring anywhere, in the more contemplation of the figures, even if we do look at them very much as a hungry but penurious gamin looks through a baker's window at the good things he cannot reach. The receipts daily were as follows:

September 25 $100,000

September 26 500,000

September 27 700,000

September 28 2,900,000

September 29 2,000,000

THE STOCK BROKERS.

The New York Graphic says of the stock brokers' panic:

The power of organized wealth was never distinctly felt, as in the closing of the Stock Exchange for a week, it is now known beyond all peradventure that had the Exchange remained open, Vanderbilt and Jay Gould must both have gone down—or rather the brokers through whom they operate on Wall street. The stopping of the Exchange business enabled these great monopolists to set up, and the moment the settlement was made stocks took a jump, and the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange announced the resumption of business. It is a question whether it would not have been wiser and better for the interests of the country at large to have allowed these great operators to go by the board, even if Central had sold down at 50. For, though the crisis might have been sharper, it would have been swifter, and we should have got over the troubles in less time and before the difficulty extended to commercial circles. However, all is well that ends well.

ANDREW JOHNSON'S LOSS.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The statement that ex President Johnson lost $60,000 by the failure of the First National Bank of Washington has been confirmed. As this sum comprised the bulk of his means, which he has saved from a long life devoted to public services, and as the above bank is not only hopelessly broken up, but also disgraced, we have no doubt that the ex-President will receive very general sympathy in his loss. Whatever signs of omission or commission are to be charged to Andrew Johnson, it has never been intimated that he was dishonest. If he had been, his fortune would probably have been larger than $60,000. Financial matters, and especially in the matter of donations, it will be remembered that he was scrupulously particular, in which respect he differs from government officials of the present day.

An Utterance on Back-Pay.

The Republican convention, which nominated Phineas Baldwin, a farmer for the Senate from the western district of Dane county, Wis., besides declaring that the Republican was the true party of progress, anti-monopoly and reform, delivered the following stinger on back-pay:

Resolved, That we denounce the action of our Senators and Representatives in Congress who received, voted for, or favored in the least what is commonly known as back-pay, and we hold that any public officer who endeavours to procure any increase of emoluments of his office, either retrospective, present, or prospective, should be either demanded, requested by his constituency to resign, and be considered as ever thereafter disqualified to receive any office of honor or emolument within the gift of the people.

AN OLD BIBLE.

The Meridian Call says: "At the Adams Express office is a Bible of date 1764, for which an owner is wanted. It was sent to Charles Andrews or heirs, or heirs next of kin to Elton Andrews, Meriden. In the family record in the book it is stated that Elton Andrews died September 22, 1784. He married for his second wife Mrs. Sarah Hall Johnson, they had but one child, Elton Andrews—born in Meriden in 1785, and who died in Utica, New York, in 1856. Several of the Andrews of the city have been consulted in regard to the book, but know of none who can truly claim it. It seems desirable the book shall be removed from the express office as soon as possible, inasmuch as the boys there have a strong passion for perusing its pages, and with what wear and tear it may get soiled and the leaves worn so the reading will not be legible."

THE COST OF WAR.

Some English statisticians have recently been making some interesting investigations with regard to the cost of war in that country. Twenty years before the Crimean war, the military and naval expenditures of the country was ten millions. In 1854, the year before the war, it had risen to sixteen millions. Since the termination of the war it has averaged more than twenty-six millions per annum. This amount, including interest, which is paid to sustain the army and navy and exceed the total value of the coal produced in the United Kingdom. The annual war expenditure present and past far exceeds the total deposits of the industrial and economic classes invested in all the savings banks, while the expense of keeping up the army and navy last year was only £4,000,000 less than the value of the entire imports of wheat, barley, oats, maize and flour for the same time, which amounted to £30,000,000.

THE STOCK BROKERS.

The New York Graphic says of the stock brokers' panic:

The power of organized wealth was never distinctly felt, as in the closing of the Stock Exchange for a week, it is now known beyond all peradventure that had the Exchange remained open, Vanderbilt and Jay Gould must both have gone down—or rather the brokers through whom they operate on Wall street. The stopping of the Exchange business enabled these great monopolists to set up, and the moment the settlement was made stocks took a jump, and the Governing Committee of the Stock Exchange announced the resumption of business for the season, the frost of the last few nights having put a stop to the working of clay, about the usual amount of brick having been made.

MONTHLY MARKET.

Posters have been issued for a monthly cattle fair at Chaska, commencing on Saturday next the 11th inst. We are informed that premiums will be given for the best stock on exhibition.

WOOD.

Wood is at rather a dull fall for the last few days owing to the falling off in price, but there seems to be a fair prospect ahead by the reports from foreign countries. Barley has taken a jump and struck for higher wages.

THE BRICK YARDS.

The Winona Republican of Saturday says: Messrs. John Douglas and Abner Lewis returned, on Thursday, from a trip over the Northern Pacific Railroad, going as far west as Bismarck. We learn from them that the settlers along the road are highly pleased with the bountiful crops—both root and cereals—which have been raised this season, and which abundantly testify to the remarkable fertility of the soil. The opinion is quite general that the check which the road may receive from the failure of Jay Cooke & Co. will only tend to concentrate immigration to the country already opened by the road, instead of allowing it to scatter further west. In this view of the case the northern part of the State will be rapidly developed.

The Old Forty-Niner.

"Another pioneer is gone,"
The San Francisco papers say;
And still the heedless world wags on,
As ever it did in other days;

But I know not in what store
Our tales begin, at least years;
Surprise us, as a magician's lay;
And long as his bewitching eyes.

At night he'd sit beside the stove
And puff a stony and rather black
The while each yard his ancient wove
Was half more frayed than the last.

And we'd sit round the fire,
Or under old men of big bones,
Or under camp and rugged cheer,
And early chores' jokes and crimes.

Immense was he in argument,
But logic taught him little, though;
But facts he could with ease invent,
And point them in an endless flood.

He'd stand with musing zest,
Delighted in the world, the best
Of which he knew the least about.

When one a stubborn truth would bring,
He'd meet it with: "Young friend,
You cannot teach me anything,
For I am the true forty-nine!"

He'd shrug his shoulders,
When red men tracked us from the grass;
When we'd sit round the fire,
When all went soundly safe, there'd die.

By random shot, his Indian lass.
I raised her up—but she was dead!—
My own dear wife!—accused the fate!
We sobbed with him—till the sad,

My other wife was in the States! —

JOSEPH AND ZULAIKA.

BIBLE Story in Persian.

The London Athenaeum gives a careful review of the "Analysis and Specimen of the Persian Poem, 'Le Poème des Rois'." It is published by Wilhams & Norgate, and in the review occurs some interesting points relating to the poet and the poem. Oriental poetry, the critic holds, like Oriental art, has its own peculiar genius, and the western mind must be trained before it can appreciate or understand the poem of "Joseph and Zulaika," one of the gems of Persian poetry, by Abdurrahman Hu Ahmed—or, as he is usually called, Nus-ed-din Jami, from the place of his birth—is, perhaps, the work most likely to be attractive, the most difficult to understand, and the most patient of readers will get through it in a whole year, and even then, in many beauties. The present modest little brochure, which contains the analysis of the story, which connected the specimens of the most interesting portions, is quite enough to satisfy an English reader.

AMONG.

THE Canada Southern Railroad Company have, owing to the financial crisis in New York, been obliged to cancel all their contracts for the present, and have ordered the discharge of all their workmen not employed on regular trains running over road. With more detail than in our own version. Malik, the leader of the Median caravan, is anxiously expected in Egypt; the news of the beautiful slave of the Hebrew race whom he brings with him has already preceded him, the Hebrews desiring to see the first signs of him. When Joseph is brought out from the palace a crowd has gathered round the gate to behold him. Zulaika, passing at the moment in her litter, catches a glimpse of him, recognizes him, and, on her return to her litter, who is intending to purchase him, and to request, as a reward for his services, that he may be Joseph and adopt him for his son. The king consents, and Joseph becomes an inmate of Potiphar's household. We should say that Zulaika had given her husband all his own jewels and ornaments, and that he was now in a position to purchase the services of a slave.

— Since the year 1848, in which gold was first discovered in California, that State has produced $1,300,700,000 worth of the precious metal. The great est yield was in 1853, in which year
the product was $93,000,000.

Something of a Fog.

During a heavy fog, away down East, a young man was sent out to a meadow to nail up a few shingles to an unfinished roof. At dinner, continues the farmer, who tells the story, the fellow came in, and says he "That's a mighty long barn you've got down there," said I.

"Not very long," said I. "We," said he, "I have been at work all the forenoon, and I haven't got to the end of it yet."

"Then sez I, You must be a mighty lazy fellow, that's all I've to say."

So after dinner I went down to see what he had been about, and may I be galled to narration that he hadn't shingled the whole length of the barn and about a hundred feet right into the fog. Fact!

— Three-quarters of every radical speech, last season, was taken up in magnifying the amazing prosperity of the public. As the country has just seen an outcrop of that "prosperity" in a panic threatening universal bankruptcy, we are a little curious to learn what capital stock these stampers are drawing on just now. If the party was entitled to credit for a prosperous paper inflation, why is it not responsible when the fiction breaks down, and its rottenness and unreliable character are exposed? Perhaps some of the crators will tell us why.

— History repeats itself in novel ways. When Jackson was President he found the old United States Bank rotten and unreliable, and at once removed the government deposits back to the treasury. Now that Grant is President, he removes deposits, but in a somewhat different way. The day before the First National broke at Washington, he took his $30,000 out in a tin box, and carried it over to the White House. But he left a $100,000 public money unsecured, to go down with the concern. Probably no two executive acts in American history more completely illustrate the character and disposition of these two men. Jackson saved the people's money, and Grant saved his own.

— Ten States hold annual elections this year. Pennsylvania, Ohio and Iowa will vote next Tuesday, October 14th, Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York and Massachusetts have their elections November 4th. Texas holds hers November 3d. The other State elections are already over, and were generally of a purely local nature. The return ticket carried California, against all parties, and wherever organization has prevailed, has swept everything before it. We think the impulse will not fail in any Western State, but if unsuccessful now, the cause is sure of success hereafter.

— The Brick season has just closed. There has been manufactured in this town during the past summer over four million brick.

— The WEATHER — We have been enjoying delightful weather for the past few days. We sincerely hope it will continue pleasant for some time longer.

— PUBLIC SCHOOL — School will reopen on Monday next, Oct. 20th under the supervision of Mr. Fred Thomas as principal and Miss Constance E. Du Toit as assistant teacher.

— BUILDING. — Several buildings are in the course of erection, and a view of Chaska (from any of the surrounding elevations) has a prepossessing appearance. Mr. Jacobs has built a snug little house near the M. & St. L. Depot.

— Mr. Peter Ilius our go-ahead townsmen has fitted up the brewery formerly owned by Mr. Young, and now is going to furnish good beer to the thirsty. Having secured the services of Mr. J. Heinberger, who understands his business well, we believe the undertaking a success.

— The social gathering at friend Popitz on the evening of the 13th was a grand affair. All seemed to enjoy themselves to the fullest extent, as far as tripling the light fantastic toe, a good glass of lager, and a fine supper can give. We saw several of our Carver friends with a smile of satisfaction on their fair faces, and were pleased to see them.

— No sooner does experience demonstrate that this country has an excess of paper circulation, than an itching desire seizes the public mind to rid itself. — With the news of the late panic, came the additional information that St. Louis had started a skin-plaster factory. This was speedily followed at Washington; and now the Georgia railroads are issuing fare tickets in the likeness and similitude of Bank notes, to pay current expenses. It is nearly time for the salvers to take a hand in. Bills, "good for a drink" would be at least a popular form of adulteration, and stand on as bold a position as rival issues. Such devices are very ready to get hold of men's wages and property without paying for it. The great principle is rapidly extinguishe — Conveniently has finally decided, by the decisive majority of $6,000, that it will thereafter indulge in the luxury of only one capital, which we suppose will be at Hartford. It has cost half a fortune of wrangle to reach this conclusion. Now that it is over, we may reasonably expect the State to return to the good old way of giving rousing Democratic majorities. It has already suffered much from the blight of radicalism.

— An old farmer residing near reading Pa., recently married a poor match girl. Unfortunately for him and his dreams of happiness, the young lady has proved that matches are not made in Heaven, by running off with a "handsome man." Match makers are at all times a dangerous class of the community, and this loan and slippery pastime must doubtless by this time have realized the truth of the fact that May and December cannot live together, and that he is no match for the maker of matches.

— The cake for the wedding of the Duke of Edinburgh with the Russian Princess will weigh 230 pounds.

The product was $93,000,000.

Claire, Vilma, come this way:

"Why are you absent, Mary Day?"

"Now, Miss Susan, what's twice four?

"May be it's 'even,' may be more."

"Johnny, don't blow in your brother's ear;

Save your table; how begin—

"Trustee might come drooping in.

What we will do, as you sit there,

With such a school in such a town?"

"Baby Jessie, what's that?"

"O God, don't spell cat!"

Terrible boy! your face is red—

"Why will you stand up your head?

"Come in again, my dears."

Playful girls, like you;

Such as you, come this way:

"Come in again, my dears."

The Governor of Illinois doesn't much in his Thanksgiving proclamations. He appoints the 27th day of November "a day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the mercies and blessings of nearly every one running both sides, but we feel confident that the Democratic ticket will in the main be elected. But it is for you voters to decide. You are the persons interested. It is of far greater importance to the tax-payers of this County, that honest, trustworthy and competent county officers are elected than that either Davis or Barton take the Governor's chair.—Look to it that every voter in the County is at the polls.

By mistake in printing the list of candidates we omitted the name of E. B. Harrison of Chanhassen the Democratic nominee for the Legislature in this district. Mr. Harrison received the unanimous nomination of the Convention, and is entitled to the support of all parties. He is one of the solid intelligent farmers of the county, an old sotter, and perfectly familiar with the wishes of his constituents. The farmers put him forward as their candidate and will elect him by an overwhelming majority.

CORRECTION.—During our absence last week, a local notice relating to the Dr. Lewis accident was inserted into our columns, which was inaccurate in many particulars. It was an unforeseen occurrence and Mr. Bruno Schubert cannot be blamed. We cheerfully make this explanation in justice to Mr. Schubert.

To the Republicans of the 3d Legislative District, of Carver County.

A vote for the anti-monopoly ticket is a rebuke to corruption. The persons who will cast it keenly in Minnesota, are thus Congressmen who helped to take from the National treasury $1,163,000 as back pay after their term closed; and $2,115,000 forward pay before the next term commenced. Each one who has received the latter, has drawn in advance of service $5,250, and those who took both, $10,250. It is these characters your votes should strike. Every ballot given the farm ticket is a blow at these corruptionists. Hit them hard; farmers and workmen. Make them feel your indignation at the polls.

A barge propelled by horse power, is being experimented with on the Upper Mississippi, for freighting purposes.

DIED.—On Sunday the 19th inst., of Typhoid fever, after an illness of one

Voters of Carver County.

As Mr. Hecklin has seen fit to attack us personally, through the columns of the Minneapolis Free Press, we take this method of replying to the same; although we do not deem it necessary, as the intelligent voter of this county can discern his motives in so doing. The drift and burden of his article is, that we will not attend to the office personally.

This we have contradicted once and now affirm that if elected, we will attend to and administer the duties of the office in person, and we hope to the satisfaction of the people of the County. As to Mr. Hecklin's manner, and mode of attending faithfully to his office during the last 8 years they are well known to every man in the County, and need no further ventilation at our hands. We leave the result in the hands of the people, believing that their verdict will be a proper one.

ANOTHER ACCIDENT.

We learn from Ernst Hamlin Esq., of Watertown that Hon. Olas Lienau of that place had the misfortune yesterday
to break his leg below the knee.

Mr. Lienau was at work with his team in the field. The team became righteously and unmanageable and Mr.
Lienau was thrown forward and his leg came between the wagon rear and as elbow. His body was drawn under one of the forewheels and in this painful position he was compelled to remain for about ten minutes, when he was relieved by Mr. Doyle who heard his call for help and went to his relief.

Fortunately when Lienau fell under the wagon the reins caught around the hub of one of the wheels and were thus drawn so tight upon the frightened team as to bring them to a stop.

But for this fortunate circumstance Mr.
Lienau would undoubtedly have lost his life.

Rheumatism.—Among many remarkable cures by Dr. Trask's Magnetic Ointment, I find the following:

I found my friend Deacon Barber, of this place, prostrate and helpless from a severe attack of Inflammatory Rheumatism.
With his consent I made a thorough application of the ointment to the diseased part rubbing it on with my own hands. I used a small bottle. The next morning he was able to come to the breakfast table,
and said he felt like a new man though it had sent me a good Providence had sent me there.
Within a week he was perfectly well
and at work on his farm.

"I'll light you down the avenue,

And held the lamp, with one white hand,
Up high to her shiny hair
And on her lip face,
And on her arm and shoulder, curved
With such surpassing grace,

I'll open a bit of vine
And lattice, o'er her head,
Upon a rose-bud at her throat,
And a red rose-red red.
And a red rose-red was above where
There shone the lamp's soft light—
A glowing picture in a frame of slate night—
A frame of slate night—

I turned to look a hundred times—
"A beautiful tableau?"
I called, and she laughed back: "Take care!
Be careful how you go!"

"Oh, what a time I ever had!"
However dark or cold—yet still!
It will be bright near here!

And then her eyes were bright—
She turned joy possessed my heart,
Almost as keen as pain—

ON THE TRAMP.

I was only a clown, a painted, grimacing clown, attached on a small salary, to a theater in the capital of one or the little duchies into which Germany was divided before the genius and subtlety of the Prussians had effected their final conquest into the one.

My role was popular because everybody liked to laugh, and likes one puts them in a laughing mood. My makeup was considered a marvel of perfection. My songs always took, and my gestures and grins always pleased.

One night I went home completely worn out body and mind. My little sister Ada, fifteen years old, and light and graceful as a sylph, who was engaged as a dancer at the same theater, also seemed dispirited and exhausted, and played like a child every night, and the whole company was half dead with exertion which exercised a strong influence on my spirits that evening. For many weeks I had been using my time to practice Dora, the principal dancer in the theater, who was less lovely in mind and heart than in her person. She was the most beautiful woman I had ever seen; tall, well formed, graceful; eyes like sapphires, and she was about me with a smile, and every night, and the whole company was half dead with exertion which exercised a strong influence on my spirits that evening. FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Ventilation of Cupboards.

In the sanitary arrangement of houses, the doors to the closets, the ventilation of cupboards is neglected. In places lat as pantries, closets are the receptacles for bread and the fragments of various other kinds of food. Often the dirty clothes are put away in these places waiting for the washing. It is a professed fact that dirt should be plentifully passed through such corners; generally, however, there is but little arrangement made for this purpose. The doors are kept closed without any perforation. There are no ventilators in the walls, and, in consequence, those places become so populous that when the doors are opened, escape over the apartments. This defect is visible in nearly all houses of old date; and while looking at some dwellings of recent construction, it is seen that, although care has been generally taken to ventilate stairs and rooms, the cupboards are in this respect neglected.—Dot. in Ohio Farmer.

When to Plant Deep.

Intelligent farmers know, or should know, that it will not do to plow eight inches deep when the surface soil was only six. This may be done in the case of a heavy soil, but it is to make a good, deep soil, the progress downward should be gradual. Let a proper portion of the subsoil be brought to the surface and exposed to the action of the sun, rain, wind and frost, then add the measure necessary to render it fertile. By pursuing this plan for successive years a fertile soil will be made, the natural effects of severe droughts and be fitted also for the successful culture of all ordinary crops. By this means the mineral constituents of the subsoil become thoroughly intermixed with the soil of the surface, and the consequent of oft-repeated shallow plowings has been depleted of them.

To make a good soil by this method, the plowing should be done in the summer and fall, in order that the newly turned-up subsoil may be subjected to the action of the sun, winds, and showers of summer, before the freezing and thawing. But after all this is done it will be found that good crops cannot be produced unless there is a liberal application of manure. Plow deep and manure generously and you will have good soil and bountiful yield. It is bad policy to "plant deep" when there is only a thin stratum of mould or yellow soil, and to bury this shallow portion beneath the surface.

DAY COWS Come in the Fall.

It is worth considering whether it would not be a good plan for some farmers who milk half a dozen or more cows to have their herds sent to the usual place and let the calves come in about September 1st. There is certainly something in favor of such a plan. It would give fair butter production during the time when prices are the highest, the quantity produced diminishing at the time when prices are declining. In spring and during fall, however, the price of butter is low, it is low when it is difficult to make good butter, when the farmer's family is especially busy with the harvest work, and when the pastures are parched by drought, the cows would be leaving their annual rest from milking.

The time suggested for calving would not be so good if the calves were to be raised—as they are ordinarily treated and they would require good treatment during the winter if the plan was to be made successful.—Farmers' Union.

Hesitate Quantities in a Pig.

Of all the desirable qualities in a pig, a vigorous appetite is the first in importance. A hog that will not eat is of no more use than a mill that will not grind. And it is undoubtedly true that the more a pig will eat, in proportion to size, provided he can digest and assimilate it, the more profitable he will prove.

The most desirable quality is, perhaps, quietness of disposition. The blood is derived from the food, and flesh is derived from the blood. Animal force is derived from the transformation of flesh. The more of this is used in unnecessary motions, the greater the demand on the stomach, and the more food there will be required to sustain the body's functions—and the more frequently flesh is transformed and formed again, the tougher and less palatable it becomes.

This quality, quietness of disposition, combined with a small amount of useless parts, or offal, has been the aim of all modern breeders. Its importance will be easily understood when we find that 75 per cent of food is ordinarily consumed to support the vital functions, and that the slight additional demand of only one-sixth more food is required for the extra offal parts and unnecessary activity.

Such a coarse, restless animal would gain in flesh and fat in proportion to the food consumed only half as fast as the quiet, refined animal. To assume that a rough, coarse, savage, ill-bred mongrel hog will require only one-sixth more food than a quiet, refined, Berkshire, Essex, or Suffolk, is not extravagant.

Sheep Eating Their Wool.

Instances of sheep eating their own wool are quite common, especially during the latter part of the winter and early in the spring. Some have thought the habit resulted from the presence of small parasites, as minute as the red spider of some flowering plants, which produce an irritation, and to allay this the sheep acquired the habit of biting its own skin, and thereby came to eat wool. It is believed, however, that the habit is analogous to that of hens eating their own shells, and the abnormal appetite of cows for old bones, wooden eggs, etc., and is caused by an exhaustion of the phosphatine in the soil. Old pastures and fields that have long been cropped are deficient in calcium, and the want of this causes them to eat the feed and consequent want of them by the animals.

An ingenious Illinoisan has just invented a most useful appliance to clean boats, which will facilitate their movements greatly, and prevent disturbing the water. The invention, called shovel, there being two each of them, is to shave by moving back and open by moving forward. They have strong propelling power when set in motion, and can be turned by hand or by steam.

To Insure Heifer Calves.

The question of the possibility of controlling sex in animals has long been a vexed one. The investigations, so far as they come under the observation of the Western Rural, have not carried conviction that the sexes can be controlled at the will of the breeder with any degree of certainty. A correspondent of the Canada Farmer thus gives his views on the subject, the truth of which may be verified by careful trial by the curious in such matters, it is of more importance to breeders than many now at first sight.

"Many farmers wish to breed heifers from favorite cows. To accomplish this nothing more is necessary than to watch carefully when the cow is in heat, and, before milking her, to take her to the bull. Five times out of six the resulting calf will be male. If the rule fails, under some cases of management, the cause is due to not taking the cows in time, as the instances from which the above rule failed were taken in the month of April for ten years, during which time a large dairy herd was rented from two or three favorite cows. It seems that the full odder causes the sex to be pretty nearly determined, as even if partially relieved by milking the desired result is not by any means so likely to follow."

Teaching Gardening as an Art.

I am following the very creditable article going the rounds of the papers uncredited. We make room for it, on account of its intrinsic merit. Touching this subject, S. B. Parsons writes: "Gentlemen of farms, and towns with country places, the proper management of which would give more pleasure to a whole family, than anything else are unwilling to pay more than $1,000 per year for a good gardener, whose knowledge is the work of a lifetime. They will give $3,000 to $5,000 for a man who can cultivate one to five thousand dollars in a camel's hair shawl or a pair of horses, and yet would think themselves very extravagant if they gave $2,000 per year for a skillful gardener, who could produce for their use, Mexican beans, and other vegetables, and who could make their grounds and gardens like a paradise.

One establish the fact that a skillful gardener can be sure of $2,000 or $3,000 per year, and numerous young men would give their education that direction, leave their sons a large fortune, and bequeath their lands to their heirs, before sealing the first fence of the garden, before the sentinel noticed them. While they were sealing it they were seen by the sentinel, who immediately fired on his gun. All the soldiers and the Governor rushed out of the building, and the Governor ordered the soldiers to fire on the convicts, who had now surrounded the mine toward the barracks, hoping to surprise the Governor, and capture him.
